I’ve lived with HIV for many years. Should I be tested for hepatitis?

May 2, 2018 By Lucinda K. Porter RN

Yes. The Centers for Disease Control and Protection (CDC) recommends hepatitis B and C testing for everyone with HIV. Testing is also advised for people born from 1945 through 1965, men who have sex with men, and those who have used injection drugs, especially if they shared any drug-related equipment.

Hepatitis C is the most common bloodborne virus. More people die as a result of hep C than from all 60 reportable infectious diseases combined. Viral hepatitis can be asymptomatic for decades, and may cause serious liver damage without you knowing it.

May is Hepatitis Awareness Month and Hepatitis Testing Day is May 19. Click here to learn more about viral hepatitis.
