More on Mail-Order Pharmacies

August 19, 2013 By Oriol R. Gutierrez Jr.

In the September 2013 issue of POZ, we spotlight the disconcerting trend of health insurance companies mandating the use of mail-order pharmacies for HIV meds.

Larry Kramer raised awareness by penning a POZ op-ed about his bad experiences with mail-order meds, which I followed up in a blog post about my own bad encounter.

Those two stories garnered such an outpouring of comments from readers that we wanted to explore the topic in-depth, which we've done. Click here to read our feature story.

With lawsuits still in the air, the issue is far from over. Case in point: I recently had yet another bad experience with my mail-order meds.

Because they didn't process my order correctly, it was canceled and they didn't tell me. I wouldn't have known unless I called to find out why my order was so delayed.

So, I encourage all of you who are experiencing mail-order troubles to read our feature story and share it to continue raising awareness.
