MyPetVirus.com Relaunch... Questions?

March 27, 2009 By Shawn Decker

So I had a cold for about a week, which blew. But from that agony (it wasn't that bad) good things happened- I missed a terrible movie that I didn't want to see in The Knowing, and ate a lot of soup.

I was trapped inside my home, body and mind. Which meant I was able to complete a Synthetic Division remix. Basically, that meant a lot of nerdy noodling on the computer that I call making music. I'll post the remixed cover of Tori Amos' "Raspberry Swirl" soon...

In the meantime, I need your help. In my weakened state, I also did a redesign for my book site My Pet Virus. There's a Frequently Asked Questions section that is blank. I wanted to see if you'd be so kind as to email me a question, and I'll take the most frequently asked and answer them.

Or the ones that inspire the most witty retort. Something golden that will wear down someone who happens upon the site, and they will be powerless to resist the urge to buy my book.

That would be awesome. So think of something obvious or less obvious and fire away. I want to reward one person for the time and effort, everyone else will just have to be altruistic in their motivation to help out.

So, if your question makes the cut and you're the chosen one, I'll send you either a copy of my CD, Get With the Programs, or a copy of My Pet Virus. Blood relatives are not eligible for this give away, or movie review partners. Inductees into Shawn's Tool Academy are also disqualified.

Positively Yours,
Shawn
