Tell Obama to man up and tell insurance companies to get lost! Tell him to look down and find his balls!

February 25, 2010 By Eric Sawyer

I am listening to the President, Democrats and Republicans all talking a lot of shit about health care reform! They are all such sell outs and are so far into the pockets of insurance companies that they can not say anything that is not about health insurance.

The health care debate should not be a discussion of mandated health insurance plans, it should be about access to health care. Trying to design a good mandated insurance program is an oxymoron, insurance companies won't change - the involvement of health insurance companies in the health care equation is the largest part of the problem with the health care system in America.

President Obama needs to man up and tell insurance companies to go away!  President Obama needs to find some balls and tell insurance companies to get lost! We don't need them sucking 30% of every dollar out of the health care delivery system in the USA!

President Obama needs to listen to what every health economist in the country, and what every public health expert that does not have a pay check coming from the insurance company has said; they all say "ONLY A SINGLE PAYER NATIONAL HEALTH CARE SYSTEM FOR ALL WILL SOLVE THE HEALTH CARE CRISIS IN THE USA!!"

At a minimum the the President needs to say loud and clear that every American deserves the option to opt into a new and improved National Medicare System!!

No American deserves to be mandated to buy health insurance so that their Insurance Company can then steal one third of every dollar from them that they are paying for their health care.

We need a national improved single payer health care system for all!
