Nasty Campaign...Virtuous Design

October 20, 2008 By David Capogna

In the mists of the final days to the presidential election, the gloves are off! ABC news reported today on GMA that BOTH campaigns are ?leaving the facts by the side of the road.?

I say great design is ALWAYS the answer, and the editors of Men's Vogue agreed! They had Pentagram's graphic designer extraordinaire, Michael Bierut, commissioned to design a pin, which symbolizes bipartisanship. The pin used the three letters of the country in an interesting way, ?S? for ?Sarah?, ?Sucker?, ?Senior?, or ?Schlemiel,? and ?A? for ?pro-American?, ?Accomplished? and upside down in the form of a ?V?: ?Victorious!? ?S? and ?A? are literally woven into a ?U? to typify ?United,? showing that we're all in this crazy country together! White to black to every color in between, straight, gay, bi, transgender, employed, non-working, health insuranced, homeless, Roman Catholic to Muslim to atheist, negative to positive or ?I don't know?... Let's all support the USA...somebody's got to!!! Please visit Men's Vogue to purchase your pin, with proceeds benefiting Puppies Behind Bars.

Drill, Baby, Drill...oh, sorry...USA USA USA!!!

Dplus

To read more of this gibberish, please visit my website

© 2026 Smart + Strong All Rights Reserved.