Crime Blotter

The month for brides? HA! For HIVers, June ’05 is for unsafe-sex arrests.

August 1, 2005 By Lucile Scott

06.10—A Georgia court denied bail to a 26-year-old man busted in April for allegedly not telling his partner he has HIV. The med student posted bail but allegedly violated parole twice with similar sex acts. He now faces three counts of felony reckless conduct.

06.14—A Massachusetts woman was charged with armed robbery and assault for allegedly stabbing a security guard with a syringe after he accused her of shoplifting. Witnesses say the 21-year-old then taunted customers, asking, “Does anyone else want AIDS!?!”

06.21—Ohio cops arrested a woman—who they claim is HIV positive—for prostitution. The 34-year-old has 30 prior hooking arrests, and her current charges were raised to felony status for her alleged failure to disclose. Police would not tell POZ how they discovered her status.
