

Milestones

October 1, 2000 By Denny Lee

Tribute

Peter McWilliams

1949-2000

After his conviction for growing it—a federal judge was expected to sentence him to prison or house arrest, despite California’s famed medical-marijuana initiative—PWA Peter McWilliams had to undergo weekly drug tests to prove he’s really quit smoking spliffs (See “Drag King, POZ 1999). The extended court battle sapped his strength and resources (he had to declare bankruptcy) but he continued to amass letters of support to present as evidence. Taking Marinol (a synthetic version of the drug) helped him keep his food and pills down only about a third of the time, reported McWilliams, who died at home on June 214 when he choked on his own vomit. His codefendant and fellow cancer survivor Todd P. McCormick sent this memorial from Terminal Island federal prison.

Like many others who have grown to admire his humorous and eloquent writing, I first learned of Peter through one of his books. On Valentine’s Day 1992, my mom gave me a copy of Do It! Let’s Get Off Of Our Butts. Considering that Do It! was one of Peter’s five appearances on New York Time’s bestseller list. I’m not sure I’m not alone when I say that it changed my life. Had it not been for his call to personal action I most surely would not be writing this today in a federal prison, but instead would be living within personal prison far worse—something far worse.

Peter was more interesting in making his work available to those he thought it might help than he was profiting—much of his work is available for free at www.mcwilliams.com. His first book of poetry, Come Love With Me and Be My Life, written when he was 18—the same year he realized that he was gay—would become his first best seller, but before it was rejected by many short-sighted companies. This rejection caused Peter to start his own publishing company, VerseMonger. After Come Love With Me, Peter would go on to write nearly 40 books.

This is a man who, when depressed, wrote How To Heal Depression. When loved drifted away from him, he wrote How to Survive The Loss of a Love. When he wanted a little privacy, he wrote Aint’ Nobody’s Business If You Do. When he was diagnosed with both AIDS and non-Hodgkin’s lymphoma in March of 1996, disease became yet another topic for Peter to tackle. He saw death as a great mystery. But what medical marijuana did for him was no mystery at all. The effect from the age-old herb was so profound that he felt he had to help others get access to it. All of our time together was dedicated to bringing the truth—and plant—to light. I believe his heroic efforts cost him many good years. In the government's quest to suppress our rights, they pushed Peter to the edge. We joked he should write Death 101—but he died before the project got done. This world would bear witness of his life. He did his best to help others learn from his experiences. I will forever miss my dear friend. To me, he will always be my hero.

Trials

The estate of Bill Thorne, a veteran ACT UP/Golden Gate member (See Tribute, POZ December 1999). Settled a police-brutality lawsuit against New York's finest. Following up ACT UP's 10th anniversary return to Wall Street in March 1997, PWA Thorne charged that officers had tackled him to the ground, slammed his head on the pavement and hurled such crude epitaphs as "diseased faggot" and "motherfucking cocksucker." Friends said that Thorne never fully recovered and that his death; last year at age 35 was at least in part a result of the beating. Although the city refused to admit liability, Thorne's estate will receive $187, 000 in the settlement.

Awards

Jeanne White, mother of Ryan White, was honored in June by AID Atlanta, a regional AIDS group. Also give the nod: The Fulton County Planning Council, for "fair and equitable" distribution of federal HIV meds.

Careers

The National Institutes of Health (NIH, which oversees U.S. AIDS research, will remain leaderless until after November's national elections. Harold E. Varmus, MD appointed director by President Clinton in 1993, left in December of head of New York City's Memorial Sloane-Kettering Cancer Center. Two names floating in January as possible successors: Gerald D. Fischbach MD, director of the National Institute of Neurological Disorder and Stroke, and Steven E. Hyman, MD, director of the National Institute of Mental Health. Fischbach's nomination was withdrawn in April. "The appointment will be deferred until the next administration comes in," NIH spokesperson Donald Ralbowlsky said. In the meantime, NIH Deputy Director Ruth Kirschstein, MD, will pinch-hit. "In politics, nine months is a very short time," said Jeff Jacobs of the DC -based lobby group AIDS Action. "But it doesn't make the situation correct."

In June, AIDS Action Committee, the largest provider of services in New England, appointed Kathleen Steger Craven of Boston Medical Center's Clinical AIDS Program as its director of client services. She has published studies in the Journal of AIDS and Human Retrovirology.

Deaths

New York City's PWA Health Group quietly closed its doors in May ending a notable chapter in the history of AIDS treatment. The most prominent of the buyers clubs that sprang up during the 1980's, the group trotter the globe to bring meds from Europe and South American to the U.S. It imported fluconazole, clarithromycin and other antibiotics and sole them at cost to thousands of PWAs, often months or years before the drugs were approved here. As the number of available treatments swelled, new group expanded its mission, outreach, and prevention. Staff upheavals left the group disorganized in recent years, but the closure may have been more the result of its success. "My opinion is that it served its purpose and now it is not needed," said Joseph

Sonnabend, MD, who with the late Michael Callen and the late Thomas Hannan co founded the group in 1987, months before AZT would be approved as the first anti-AIDS drug.

---

© 2026 Smart + Strong All Rights Reserved.

<http://beta.docker.poz.com/article/Milestones-7774-8674>