AIDS Hospice Favored by Princess Diana Transforms

July 14, 2010

Mildmay Mission—the London AIDS hospice where Princess Diana eased the fears of hugging and shaking hands with people living with HIV/AIDS—is being demolished to make way for a new hospital, PinkPaper.com reports. Like the hospice, the Mildmay Hospital will continue to serve people living with HIV/AIDS. It will focus on rehabilitating HIV-positive people who have neurocognitive impairments.
