Say What—Dan Savage

August 6, 2013 By Trent Straube

"The guys these sensible health care folks are trying to reach [by offering them pre- and post-exposure prophylaxis, PrEP and PEP] are not sensible. They are self-identified idiots who can only be saved by a vaccine."

Dan Savage, sex advice columnist and cofounder of the "It Gets Better" campaign, as quoted in Richard Morgan's New York Times opinion piece "Sex and the HIV Morning-After Pill." But Dan isn't always so savage. When asked at the University of Alaska, "How do you ask somebody you just started dating to get tested without sounding rude?" He said: "You ask, confident that if they regard that question as rude they are no one you want to have sex with."
