

Shortage of HIV Meds in Jamaica Leads to Rationing

January 28, 2011

Generic forms of Alluvia and Truvada are being rationed in Jamaica because of a shortage, The Jamaica Observer reports. Officials blame inclement weather in the United States and Europe late in 2010 that grounded flights from India delivering the drugs. According to the head of the country's national HIV program, a shipment of the drugs recently arrived and will be distributed soon.
