Join POZ on the Road to Washington

February 27, 2012 By Cristina Gonzalez

This summer, the XIX International AIDS Conference (IAC) is coming to our nation's capital, and POZ, an official media partner of the conference, will bring you inside the conference and to all the key events during the week. In preparation for this historic meeting of scientists, activists, policy and law makers, health care workers, counselors, peer educators, world leaders and AIDS rock stars, POZ has launched The Road to Washington—a special section on POZ.com featuring lots of ways to get engaged in the fight to end AIDS; the page also highlights results of POZ reader surveys, your personal stories and step-by-step easy lessons to become a powerful advocate for our community. We're at a unique point in the history of AIDS, and the fact that IAC happens just months before the presidential election means we have the power to leverage the conference to make a profound impact on how people with HIV/AIDS are treated around the world—and here at home.
