

AIDS Walk Philly Raises $200K to #BeALifeline

Funds from AIDS Walk Philly help provide a lifeline in the form of emergency grants to those most vulnerable living with HIV.

October 17, 2023 By Trent Straube

The 37th annual AIDS Walk Philly drew over 1,000 people and raised more than $200,000 to help the most vulnerable people living with HIV, reports CBS News.

The sun is shining as our walkers return to the Philadelphia Museum of Art to #BeALifeline!

Posted by AIDS Walk Philly on Sunday, October 15, 2023

AIDS Walk Philly is just one of the events spearheaded by AIDS Fund to raise awareness about HIV and assist Philadelphians living with the virus. Funds raised by the AIDS Walk help provide small grants—a lifeline—to folks living with HIV and facing emergency situations, such as impending evictions or the loss of health insurance or utilities. The average #BeALifeline grant is about $440, according to AIDSWalkPhilly.org.

“We’re there to help people when a financial crisis could turn into a health crisis,” Robb Reichard, executive director of AIDS Fund, told CBS. “We help them with back rent or utilities or a medical issue that might not be covered by insurance—a walker, a cane, a hearing aid, critical for people to live a long and healthy life with the treatments.”

AIDS Fund Executive Director Robb Reichard spoke with Amanda VanAllen at PHL17 to discuss why your participation in #AIDSWalkPhilly will make a huge difference for the most vulnerable people living with HIV disease. Join us this weekend on Sunday Oct 15 to Be a Lifeline!

Posted by AIDS Walk Philly on Monday, October 9, 2023

In 2020, 18,534 people were living with HIV in Philadelphia, according to AIDSvu.org, which creates interactive maps and curates HIV-related data on the city, county and state levels. That same year, 330 people were newly diagnosed with HIV.

What's more, 63.7% of Philadelphians living with HIV are Black, 16.1% are Latino and 16.5% are white. The majority (72.2%) are male.

Several local media personalities emceed the AIDS walk, and panels from the AIDS Memorial Quilt were displayed during the event.

To date, AIDS Walk Philly has raised over $18 million.

Thanks to all of you we raised $200,000 at #aidswalkphilly2023! #BeALifeline

Posted by AIDS Walk Philly on Sunday, October 15, 2023

In related fundraising news, the Windy City recently held its annual AIDS Run & Walk Chicago and a 275-mile bike ride raised a record \$2 million for HIV services at New York City's LGBT Community Center.