

Apple Raises Over $65M for (RED) HIV/AIDS Programs

October 10, 2013

Apple has raised more than $65 million for (RED), which supports HIV prevention, testing, care and treatment in Africa, TechCrunch reports. The computer company has raised about $15 million of that amount since 2012. The money comes from the sales of its (RED)-branded products, which include iPods and cases for iPads and iPhones. All of the money goes to the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria. (RED) was co-founded by U2 frontman and activist Bono in 2006.
