In most cities, restaurants help raise AIDS funds on Thursday, April 27, so make your reservations today!

April 17, 2017

Thursday, April 27, marks the annual Dining Out for Life 2017 fundraising event in most cities, a night on which a portion of sales at participating restaurants will go to HIV/AIDS organizations. One of the upcoming exceptions is Nashville, where more than 70 restaurants participate in the event on Tuesday, April 18.

According to DiningOutForLife.com, nearly 2,000 restaurants participated in the event last year, raising $4.19 million that went to 54 licensed HIV/AIDS organizations. Founded in 1991, the event is produced by local HIV organizations and is sponsored by Subaru.

Visit the website to find out whether your city—and your favorite eateries—will be participating. You can also learn more on social media by searching for @DiningOut4Life.

Below is a video from the group's Facebook page, featuring artwork from HIV-positive designer and Dining Out for Life spokesperson Mondo Guerra. Other spokespeople for the event include actress Pam Grier, foodie Ted Allen, and chef Daisy Martinez.
