Study: Most Teenagers Use Condoms, Most Adults Don’t

October 4, 2010

In the United States, most teenagers use condoms—but less than half of adults do, according to a new study from Indiana University and reported by The New York Times. Among sexually active 14- to 17-year-olds, 80 percent of boys and 69 percent of girls said they used a condom the last time they had intercourse. The study surveyed a wide range of sexual behavior. It had 5,865 participants from ages 14 to 94, including about 800 people younger than 18. Church & Dwight, the maker of Trojan condoms, financed the study, but researchers said the company had no undue influence.

To read the Times article, click here.

© 2026 Smart + Strong All Rights Reserved.

http://beta.docker.poz.com/article/condoms-most-teenagers-19201-9063