Freedom of Choice

May 16, 2016 By Jennifer Morton

These days there are a variety of treatment options available for HIV, which is great news. And since you have so many choices, it's important to work with your health care provider to select a regimen that best meets your individual needs. POZ recently asked you about your choices when it comes to your HIV treatment. Here are your responses.

63% of you began taking HIV meds within one year of being diagnosed.

92% of you say you feel comfortable talking to your health care provider about your HIV treatment options.

Top 3 factors you consider when choosing your HIV regimen:

1. Possible side effects
2. Convenience
3. Other diseases or health conditions

Have you ever asked your doctor to switch your HIV regimen?

51% - Yes

49% - No

Are you taking any generic versions of your HIV meds?
