

HealthHIV Gets $2M Grant to Help Minority Communities

November 29, 2010

The Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA) has granted HealthHIV a three-year, $2.975 million grant to create a new AIDS education and training center (AETC) to help minority communities, according to a HealthHIV statement. AETCs provide education and training programs for health care providers treating people living with HIV/AIDS. The AETC National Center for HIV Care in Minority Communities will expand care, treatment and support services for minority communities in health centers nationwide. HealthHIV will implement the new AETC with help from the National Association of Community Health Centers.
