Improving Journalism

February 18, 2016 By Trent Straube

Extra! Extra! Read all about it! Media coverage of HIV looks to improve, thanks to a $130,000 grant from the CDC to NLGJA: The Association of LGBT Journalists (formerly the National Lesbian & Gay Journalists Association). The renewable grant will fund trainings, online resources and fellowships. The hope is not just for more stories about HIV but for better media coverage, especially when it comes to complex issues such as pre-exposure prophylaxis (PrEP), stigma, HIV criminalization and drug pricing.
