Los Angeles County Voters Approve Condoms in Porn

November 8, 2012

A measure requiring adult film actors in Los Angeles County to use condoms for all anal and vaginal sex scenes was approved by about 55 percent of voters, the Los Angeles Times reports. The City of Los Angeles had previously passed a similar ordinance. The AIDS Healthcare Foundation sponsored both efforts. The issue gained attention after porn actor Derrick Burts publicly disclosed in 2010 that he had likely contracted HIV on an adult film set. The Free Speech Coalition, a porn industry group, plans to challenge the law in court claiming such regulations can only be done by the state, not localities.
