Web of Support

March 1, 2009 By Laura Whitehorn

When you or a loved one faces a serious illness, it’s critical to keep your circle of supporters updated—and to hear from them. That, however, can be time-consuming, especially when you need to be with family or at the hospital. A nonprofit called Caring Bridge (caringbridge.org) makes it quick and easy by offering a free website that connects your loved ones. You can even designate someone else to post news (and photos) and check messages.
