A Positive Spin

May 8, 2015 By Trent Straube

"Everyone's story of living with HIV is unique." That tagline appears before each video on "Positive Spin," the new HIV educational project from AIDS.gov. Its goal is to raise awareness about the five stages of the HIV care continuum, from knowing your status to suppressing the virus. Because of HIV's disproportionate impact on African-American men who have sex with men (MSM), the project includes the personal stories of five HIV-positive gay black men. One of them you'll know as POZ blogger Guy Anthony. Visit the site and follow #mypositivespin for compelling—and inspiring—stories.
