HIV prevention isn't a concern only during a specific time of life. Plain and simple: PrEP is for all ages. That's the theme of PrEP Aware Week 2024, October 21 to 27, a campaign of the New York State Department of Health's AIDS Institute that aims to raise public awareness and uptake of pre-exposure prophylaxis, or PrEP, to prevent HIV.

PrEP helps people take control of their sexual health. 30 years ago, HIV/AIDS was often a death sentence because effective treatments weren't available. Today, #PrEP lowers risk of HIV transmission, making safe sexual practices possible for those with HIV.

This year's PrEP campaign to prevent HIV features eight ambassadors from diverse backgrounds across the state. They're part of social media messages, graphics, videos, in-person events and more. Though the campaign is based in New York, it's taking off outside the state. Anyone can find the campaign on social media using the hashtags #PrEPAwareWeek2024 and #PrEPforAllAges.

“PrEP for All Ages redefines what it means to take ownership of your health, no matter what season of life you’re in,” states the HIV campaign at PrEPforSex.org. “Whether you’re younger or older, single or partnered, career-focused or retired, exploring your sexuality, or simply enjoying sexual pleasure—PrEP is for people of all ages and in all phases of life experiences. Together, we celebrate sexual health, safety, and pleasure in all seasons of life.”

To date, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has approved three forms of PrEP: Truvada and Descovy are daily pills; Apretude is a shot given every two months. Generic (and much cheaper) versions of Truvada are available. A twice-yearly injectable, lenacapavir as PrEP, may be added to prevention options in the near future, as clinical trial results have shown it to be highly effective in women, gay men and gender-diverse populations. To learn more about PrEP, see the POZ Basics on HIV Prevention: Pre-Exposure Prophylaxis \(PrEP\).

PrEP Aware Week was launched in 2019 and began making a difference right away. Researchers looked at data related to that first campaign and published their findings in the National Library of Medicine in an article titled "Assessing the Impact of PrEP Aware Week Campaign on PrEP

Prescription Refills in NYS.” Their findings stated:

PrEP Aware Week (PAW) 2019 “was associated with modest increases (6%–9%) in the number of PrEP prescription fills in NYS. The PAW impact lasted for about 2 months, generated an estimated 2,727 additional PrEP prescription fills statewide, and was realized across sex, region and racial and ethnic subgroups. Increased prescription fills were driven by those previously prescribed PrEP. Increases in new prescriptions were noted among Latinx individuals (21% increase, 55 additional prescriptions) but not overall or across other groups.”

The last week of October was chosen for the annual campaign “because of the historically low number of PrEP prescriptions during this time of year and to not interfere with other HIV/AIDS-related awareness days, many of which occur in the spring or summer months,” according to the researchers.

Since the 2019 launch, even more people have become aware of PrEP and its potential to prevent HIV.
