

Pride & Prevention

LGBTQ and HIV news

May 16, 2022 By Trent Straube

June is Pride Month, a time to celebrate and support the LGBTQ community, a population heavily impacted by HIV. In 2019, gay and bisexual men represented 56% of the 1.2 million people living with HIV in the United States; transgender women and Black and brown Americans are also disproportionately affected. Here's a roundup of recent headline-making challenges and reasons to wave your rainbow flag.

Politics

Don't say gay or trans. Homophobia, racism, stigma and discrimination put queer people at higher risk of acquiring HIV and not getting the care they need. So the growing popularity of anti-LGBTQ bills is alarming. Legislation usually targets queer youth, such as the so-called Don't Say Gay law in Florida and numerous bans on transgender student athletes and gender-affirming care for youth.

Equality wins. Gender-neutral passports are now available. Also, thanks to lawsuits filed by service members living with HIV, including Sergeant Nick Harrison, a federal court struck down the Pentagon's discriminatory HIV policies—service members can no longer be discharged or denied promotions because they have HIV.

Sergeant Nick Harrison Courtesy of Lambda Legal

Health Care

PrEP for all. The Biden-Harris administration's proposed budget for 2023 included not only a funding boost to the Ending the HIV Epidemic in the United States initiative but also the investment of $9.8 billion to expand access to PrEP, or pre-exposure prophylaxis, which refers to pills or injections taken to prevent HIV. The queer advocacy group PrEP4All—including Kenyon Farrow—applauded the move but called for strategic planning that serves populations with limited access to PrEP.

Kenyon Farrow of PrEP4All Courtesy of Kenyon Farrow

Gay blood drive. Currently, a man cannot donate blood if he has had sexual contact with another man in the past three months, even if he's monogamous. Would a questionnaire better assess a potential donor's risk? The ADVANCE (Assessing Donor Variability and New Concepts in Eligibility) study hopes to find out, and eight LGBTQ community centers are participating in the research.

Denise Spivak of CenterLink and the ADVANCE blood donor study YouTube/ADVANCE study

Measuring queer health care. The LGBTQ advocacy group Human Rights Campaign released its 15th annual Healthcare Equality Index. The results? “Diverse health care facilities across the U.S. are making tremendous strides toward LGBTQ+ patient-centered care,” the index notes. “In unprecedented numbers, they are changing key policies, implementing best practices and training their staff.”

Entertainment

Television is more queer and less HIV-friendly. For example, of the 775 regular characters on scripted prime time TV shows in the 2021–2022 season, 92 (11.9%) were LGBTQ—a record high, according to the LGBTQ advocacy group GLAAD. Representation also climbed on cable series. However, the number of characters living with HIV decreased from three main characters (all on Pose) to two minor ones: Michael on the final season of Netflix’s Dear White People and Sai on NBC’s Ordinary Joe.

From stage to screen. Playwright Donja R. Love, who graced the cover of last year’s POZ 100 issue, wrote and directed the Black LGBTQ digital series i need space, which you can watch (free!)

on Broadstream. Told through short video chats, which include a transgender man living with HIV (played by Ja'Mel Ashely), the seven-episode story, Love says, “explores loss, loneliness, love and healing.”

Donja R. Love of i need space Courtesy of The New Group/Monique Carboni

Rock stars of HIV fundraisers. Sir Elton John’s 30th annual Academy Awards Viewing Party—cohosted by Billy Porter, Eric McCormack, David Furnish and Lady Gaga—raised a record-breaking $8.9 million for the Elton John AIDS Foundation. And Lil Nas X has now raised over $500,000 through a “baby registry” linked to his debut album, Montero, to help the Gilead COMPASS Initiative fight HIV in the South. Bravo!

© 2026 Smart + Strong All Rights Reserved.

<http://beta.docker.poz.com/article/pride-prevention>