Sex as Science

November 1, 1997 By Mark O'Donnell

Sperm are tiny and wriggle; the egg is large and waits.

Man’s body is just the penis’ automobile.

Kissing also indulges the drive to eat.

Sexual union: Nostalgia for the unicellular life.

Ejaculation: Victory, surrender or a peace parley?

The roller coaster induces the thrill of losing control.

Youth is attractive because it may live to raise its young.

Fantasy life: Nature’s cable television.

When the ship finds harbor, beware of stowaways.

Remember, viruses want to get ahead, too.
