Santa Fe HIV/AIDS Health Center Opens Primary Care Clinic

March 7, 2013

The Southwest CARE (Comprehensive AIDS Treatment, Research and Education) Center in Santa Fe, New Mexico, has opened a primary care clinic, according to a statement by the center. The new clinic is open to all patients seeking primary care, as well as travel medicine, sexual health services and free anonymous rapid HIV and hepatitis C testing. The center opened the new clinic in response to requests from its patients for primary care for HIV-negative family members and partners.
