

Speak Up for Yourself (You're Worth It!)

People living with HIV offer advice on advocating for your health.

July 31, 2015

“Know your body. It’s important to get educated not just about HIV, but health in general.”

Byanca Parker

Dallas, Texas

Positive since 1993

“Take control of HIV; don’t let HIV take control of you. There is life after an HIV diagnosis. Seek treatment and live it.”

Marcus McPherson
Crystal Springs, Mississippi
Positive since 2012

Marcus McPherson Courtesy of Marcus McPherson

“I advocate for what I need because I am supposed to have it. I deserve it.”

Mechelle Jones
New York City
Positive since 1995

“In the beginning I was very scared. It was hard; there wasn’t anyone I could talk to. But I became more knowledgeable about HIV and things really started to change.”

Andrew Ballard

Alexander City, Alabama

Positive since 2003

“It’s so important to be an advocate in your own health care and arm yourself with information. If you don’t understand something, ask questions until you do.”

Suzan Meredith

Louisville, Kentucky

Positive since late '80s

Suzan Meredith Courtesy of Suzan Meredith

“Once I became empowered, I began to make better decisions regarding my treatment. I asked my doctors the hard questions; I did my own research and decided to take ownership of my disease and how it affects me.”

Guy Anthony

Washington, DC

Positive since 2005

Guy Anthony Courtesy of AIDS.GOV/Project Spin

© 2026 Smart + Strong All Rights Reserved.

<http://beta.docker.poz.com/article/speak-worth>