Hemo-Positoid Hero Bikes Across the Country

August 7, 2012 By Shawn Decker

Yesterday Barry Haarde, a long-time advocate for people living with hemophilia and HIV, completed his cross-country bike ride for Wheels For the World. 50 days and over 3,600 miles: all to raise awareness and money for people with bleeding disorders all around the world.

Thus far, Barry has raised over $20,000. To donate, click here.

A tip of the iced mocha to you Barry. You have not only conquered this goal, but you have also lived a full life with hemophilia, strength, HIV and hepatitis C. A capital “C” for Class as well. Keep fighting the good fight!

Positively Yours,
Shawn
