September 8, 2016 By Christian Kiley

How did popular media affect perceptions of the HIV/AIDS epidemic in the 90's?

In Part Three, we'll explore a sampling of films from the early to mid-90's, beginning with Longtime Companion, which was released in '89. (Late '89.) HBO's star-studded film And The Band Played On is next, followed by a Margaret Cho moment, and topped off with an extra dose of MLP™, in Boys On The Side. We're building up to the fourth installment of this series, in which Everything Changes... exciting!
