Open Blog Post to Steve... A Truce for the AIDSges?

AN OPEN BLOG POST TO STEVE

I admit it- I blogged about my War for the AIDSges with the plan to launch a slew of new barbs at you on Twitter. But a funny thing happened on the way to my laptop... I recalled all the good times, from meeting you online in 1996 and beginning our cyber-friendship, to going to NYC to see your off-Broadway smash hit The Last Session...

There's a history outside of The Hemo2Homo Connection which, ironically, was created to bring the various factions of the AIDS community together. In the end, it tore two friends apart, sending them spiraling into the abyss of a fake 140-characters-or-less feud. Not since Kurt Cobain and Eddie Vedder traded barbs in the alternative press has a clash made less sense. Well, this can't end like that...

It must not end like that.

Steve, there are no words to express how I feel. So just watch this, and think back on all the good times, and then post a Comment and let's just see where the Hemo2Homo Connection goes from there...

Positively Yours,
Shawn
