RIP Howard Zinn

January 27, 2010 By Paul Dalton

One of my greatest heroes has passed. Howard Zinn was one of the great minds, a man who looked at history not as tales of triumph, but as the stories of normal people, the struggles of the everyday- who never despaired over the possibilities for radical transformation. If you haven't read 'A People's History of the United States,' get it, read it and share it. His voice may have gone silent, but his ideas won't. The world is worse off that you are not with us- you made mine immeasurably better.
You can find many books by Zinn here
I think he would appreciate the following
