Welcome to the New POZ Personals Blog

We've create a new blog dedicated to all things POZ Personals. Stay in the loop, be involved, be part of your community.

May 16, 2018 By POZ Personals

Launched in 2005, POZ Personals offers people living with HIV a unique environment in which to seek friends and dates. For both men and women, gay and straight, young and old, of all races and nationalities, POZ Personals is a safe and trusted way to connect with others who have the virus.

This blog is intended to keep the POZ Personals community up-to-date on the latest feature roll-outs, provide tips on managing profiles and answer frequently asked questions.

We also greatly value the input of the POZ Personals community in building new features. We regularly ask for feedback on how we are doing and where members would like us to go next. We recently rolled out a major upgrade of the platform including making the site work better across desktop, tablet and mobile devices.

We have more changes planned and have asked for member feedback. If would like to share your thoughts on the new design and where we should go next please click here or cut and paste this link into your browser: https://www.poz.com/survey/poz-personals-member-survey.

Thank you for reading and thank you in advance for your feedback!
